Headline:
Outbreaks of rain gradually easing. Many places becoming dry later.

Today:
Overcast with outbreaks of rain, these easing to become mainly light and patchy by lunchtime. This afternoon patchy light rain and drizzle is still possible, but many places will become dry and perhaps brighter. Feeling rather cool with breezy conditions. Maximum temperature 18 deg C (64 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloudy for many places, with a chance of patchy light rain and drizzle. However, northern areas, especially across Lincolnshire, may have cloud breaks and clear spells developing. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Wednesday:
Generally cloudy and dry. Some bright or sunny spells may develop, especially across northern areas, with the highest temperatures likely across Lincolnshire. Maximum temperature 23 deg C (73 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Thursday generally cloudy with the chance of occasional light rain and drizzle. Friday mainly dry and cloudy, some bright spells. Sunny spells Saturday, perhaps heavy showers later, rather warm.
